PHYSICAL EDUCATION.

Mr. Sedgwick's address before the Alumni of Columbia College, (New York,) delivered on the 27th of October, and just published in a pamphlet, is full of good matter relating to education and the formation of character in early life. He says:

"From the time that the boy whose fortune it is to be educated is immured in school, till the period when he is again to be immured in the lawyer's office, the counting room, the dissecting room, and from that time again until he enters upon the profession of his life, no systematic attention whatever is paid to the subject of physical education. All the health, all the exercise that he gets he gets by nature or by chance. No regular opportunity is provided for it, no authoritative couragement is given to it, no stimulus, no prize; all the ambition, all the zeal, all the arder of his young, ignorant and unreflecting nature is concentrated on the vigil and the midnight lamp. Severe labor, long terms, short vacations, crowded rooms, late hours, bad air—what is the natural result? "What can be the result? Well has it been said that the mind perishes as the body dwindles. Not for the pale crowd of sickly dyspepties whom our colleges annually turn out are the great prizes of life. There have indeed been Pascals and Byrons and Channings, who, despite frail and miserable health, have achieved immortal things; but these are only exceptions which prove a great general rule.

"It is the man of robust and enduring constitution, of elastic nerve, of comprehensive digestion, who does the great work of life .--It is Scott with his manly form. It is Brougham with his super-human powers of physical endurance. It is Franklin, at the age of seventy, camping out on his way to arouse the Canadas, as our hardiest boys of twenty those numbers from 1 to 50,000 corresponding with those numbers on the tickets printed on separate slips of paper, are encircled with small tin tubes and placed in one wheel.

Miramichi. It is Napoleon, sleeping four hours, and on horseback twenty. It is Washington, with his coloridates. strength. These are the men who make the names which the world will not let die .-Miserable is the philosophy and the practice which fails to recognise the importance of the animal part of our complicated structure.

"What is there in our system to raise or develope such men? How is it possible for them to be produced by it? I mean our system of education. Among the classes which do not so much beast of their intellectual training, the physical man is indeed infinitely better cared for! If you seek among our people for bodily strength look at the great turn-outs of our firemen. Look at crack volunteer regiments exchanging national courtesies with our sister States. Among them you shall indeed, find that sturdy vigor, that bodily strength and agility without which all mental culture is but a preparation of disappointment and mortification.
